When Good Times Can Beget Forgetfulness

In an affluent society where the ultimate status is a two-car garage, it's easy to forget the people who are not so fortunate.

Kelowna, fortunately, has few people who are unwilling to invest in the future of their city. For that is what a citizen does when he assists the Red Feather fund, reach its objective. He invests in the future well-being of his community.

This year's target is the latest ever—$48,000. Even so, it is an after-thought being sought in either Vernon or Penticton.

Last year the fund reached its objective and there was understandable pride and a desire to grow in community headquarters. A magnificent job was done by the 1963 team and by citizens and business firms who started, fostered and carried. A superb job in fact, one worthy of the finest Kelowna traditions that Kelowna always will, almost always—meets its obligations.

This year in the Red Feather campaign we should exceed last year's fine effort. There is a building boom exploding all around us. The truth is that 1964 could be just about the biggest and most prosperous year in the city's history.

Yet the need is as great if not greater than ever. The eighteen services the Red Feather appeal covers are vital to our city's progress. They are part of our way of life.

To help the Red Feather is to help the city. It is to invest in the future of Kelowna. It's a fact that bears repeating again and again. Each contribution is an investment that adds life and vigor to a city that is proud of its past as it is confident of a great future.

It is not the year for the Kelowna team to fall down. What a sad day it would be if the Kelowna of 1964 had to take a back seat to the Kelowna of 1963. Has the generous team grown smaller while the pocketbook grows larger?

Make It Safe

Soon we will be hearing the familiar cries of "Trick or Treat" and "Anything for Halloween." October 31st, the night that all the little witches and goblins create a nightmare world, could possibly turn "Halloween" into a real nightmare if certain safety precautions are forgotten.

Here are some tips that could make your child's night a safe one.

If your child wears a flimsy costume or one made of paper, make sure it is fire resistant. Do not provide a fast torch for the wearer.

Use light-colored materials to ensure your child will be seen by motorists. Don't have costumes that are too long or too long. They may cause the wearer to trip or they may catch on protruding objects such as hedges or fences.

Mask hamper vision. It is much safer to use cosmetics than to let your child wear a mask. Dismantle cosmetics and a little imagination can go a long way. A thin film of cold cream should be applied before the makeup and used in removing it.

Lighted hairpins make a fast, effective disguise, but the child's eyes should be carefully protected during spraying.

Costumes which require play weapons should be checked to make sure that no real guns or knives are taken along.

A small battery-operated candle or flashlight should be used. The grin of a jack-o'-lantern should never be lit by a burning candle, fire danger is too great.

Know where your child is going—if supervised, and for how long. Neighborhood or community parties are good fun—why not go along?

Be extra careful of cars. Keep porch lights on to make sure your street is well lighted, and minimize the danger of accidents from cars, tripping and falling.

Check your local bylaw regarding the purchase and use of fireworks.

Home Parties. A Home decorations should be flame proof. A Wrap treats to keep them clean. A Young children should not be exposed to "Scary Games" e.g. "Hall of Horrors—Torture Chambers."

Use your head. There are two types of head costumes at Halloween time; one is the pumpkin head, the other is your head. DON'T YOU BE THE PUMPKIN HEAD!

Must Be Used

How many lives can seat belts save?

The B.C. Automobile Association reports that an estimated 6,000 persons died in car crashes last year in Canada and the United States because they did not use seat belts.

Based on information in a recent survey by the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, the BCAA said that drivers involved in 54,000 accidents admitted they use seat belts only about one-third of the time.

"Yet the risk of serious injury or death is 35 per cent less for seat belt users than for non-users," the auto club said.

The Cornell study estimates there would be a 25 per cent reduction in deaths among all occupants of cars involved in crashes if all were wearing seat belts.

The decision of the automotive industry to install seat belts after January 1, 1964, is standard equipment on new cars was an important step forward. Moreover, many used car buyers have equipped their vehicles with quality belts at reasonable prices.

"However," the BCAA said, "the problem now is to convince seat belt owners to use their new life insurance all of their driving hours. Obviously, a seat belt is useless if it is lying unfastened on the floor of your car."

The auto club urges motorists to buckle their seat belts every time they drive the car, whether it is simply a trip to the neighborhood grocer or on a cross-country journey.

In Passing

"By 1970 a hospital room will cost $50 a day," says a physician. If so, many a person will then face the tough problem of deciding whether to live solvent or live bankrupt.

Some of the people who are tired of living were probably cheered by the report that Red China will soon explode an atomic bomb.

Another reason people are so fond of living is that life is a gamble.

THE WRONG END OF THE MEGAPHONE

Stanley Park Zoo "Doc" Says Common Sense Vital

VANCOUVER, CP—Common sense is an important attribute for a zoo director, says Dr. Stuart E. Drew, veterinarian for Stanley Park Zoo.

"If you had a sick tiger, it would be the last different from a sick human," he says.

"In treating mammals, being too human can be a fatal mistake."

Dr. Drew, 34, became a veterinarian after graduating in 1938 from the Ontario Veterinary College at Guelph, Ontario, and then working in a hospital and a research laboratory.

The zoo brings pathologic, rare birds, penguins and even bears into the regular practice of cats, dogs and other household pets.

He knows he isn't popular with the zoo animals — "I've seen a dentist that was popular with children," and it's not a very large part of his practice, but it is the most interesting part."

One reason is that zoo animals suffer from a variety of ailments. Many of them must patch up after fights, for example.

And there was the case of the lion there. A lion's management ended in Drew to give a complete physical examination, examine his teeth and examine his claws when the lion was in circus around the time.

He also applied healing ointment to a lion's paw which had been hurt by a lioness when fighting with it. The lioness had been hurt by a lioness.

There are some of the more unusual cases, however. More than one lion has been given a lion's mane, which is a lion's mane.

Dr. Drew has personal likes and dislikes and the zoo animals are not the only ones.

"I'm not crazy about snakes, but lately I've become fond of them."

He likes monkeys, but he says they have more personality than most of the other animals.

But he is aware that, as a doctor, some of the most interesting cases are the ones that he is not allowed to treat.

All the world loves a baby. And it was a fine bouncing baby who stole the show when the 19 provincial premiers and the federal prime minister gathered here for the social business occasion of a state banquet with the Queen and a common-provincial conference.

This baby was the newest addition to our family of provincial premiers, the 19-year-old Ross Thatcher, newly elected Liberal premier of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Thatcher, states with Quebec's Premier Jean Lesage the excitement of having provincially elected in the House of Commons. He is well known here as a courageous politician and admitted for his unquestioned intelligence. He certainly has achieved instant rating as one of the most colorful and imaginative of our premiers.

ENRICHING HIS PROVINCE

Taking to him during his visit here, I thought I would like to say a few words about the province of Saskatchewan. It is a province of great potential, a province of great resources, a province of great people.

It is a province of great potential, a province of great resources, a province of great people.

It is a province of great potential, a province of great resources, a province of great people.

years of CCF rule had fastened onto his province. In some respects he is actually proceeding in the reverse direction to the federal Government, whose program is very active and oriented with massive state interference in our daily and business lives.

He has some vivid news on the relationship between the provinces and Ottawa.

The provinces must quit making demands on Ottawa of Canada will be through as a nation," he told me, although he speaks as the representative of a fervent province. He was shocked to find that Ottawa had not even provided him with a list of the provinces' demands for an additional $100 million, just after it had made a deal of exactly that amount to Quebec. "The provinces seem to enjoy raising the federal treasury," he said.

Mr. Thatcher has two proposals which would bring more prosperity to Saskatchewan. One is a plan to build a new highway from Regina to the north, and the other is a plan to build a new highway from Regina to the south.

He also has a plan to build a new highway from Regina to the west, and a plan to build a new highway from Regina to the east.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TEACHERS' PLEA

Sir: In your Oct. 14 issue you published an article written by Mr. Neelby concerning teachers' plea for salary increases. Teachers must agree that what he says is largely true. Salary negotiations do come up every year and this plea for increases does no good to improve their public image. It is also true that if higher salaries are paid in other provinces or the U.S., they can always go there and so others do in other professions and other walks of life.

It is perhaps also true that teachers' complaint of worn out nerves and mental exhaustion. It is also true that teachers are paid during the Christmas and Easter recesses (not during the summer months). Furthermore, their job only is paid partly by the public which they serve.

However, is it reasonable to tell only part of the story? Teachers are employed by the public (as so many others are directly or indirectly) and just as in many other forms of employment the employer contributes usually an equal sum in such plans as pensions, unemployment insurance, and the workers' compensation. These benefits are no different, they all add to the cost of the product.

Teachers are paid during the Christmas and Easter recesses, but calculate sometimes the number of days that are actually paid holidays in comparison to what employers receive in other means of employment.

As for the other two months teachers are paid on a 10 month basis for 10 months of service. However, these two months are set aside for the benefit of both teachers and students. Both need some "fresh" air and a chance to allow mental rest. This time is often utilized by teachers to increase their knowledge either formally at university or by home reading.

NOT REPRESENTATIVE
It is a good thing that Mr. Neelby's opinion does not represent that of the government or the general public, for are not our skilled and professional people on the move to areas with higher pay offered? Is this not what the "brain drain" is all about?

Salary negotiations come up annually for both the school board and the department of education have only yearly budgets. It would be far more beneficial for teachers' managers if budgets could be drawn up on a two or three year basis. Companies usually do business this way, but their problems are very different.

Corporations and unions allow for an anticipated increase in the cost of living as well as the increase in the gross national product. In this way efforts are made to establish a fair wage. If the cost of living did not move upward year by year, the only factor to consider would be the growth in national wealth which all useful people have contributed. Therefore, if all factors were constant, undoubtedly salaries and wages and thus would also.

However, it does not seem fair to expect employees in any endeavor to freeze their earnings while such things as interest rates, rents, and consumer goods are allowed free rein.

No one should wonder that teachers' complaint about exhaustion. It is part of a teacher's job to deal with individual differences, in ability, learning, readiness, student experience, physical and mental development while giving instruction in a particular subject.

These in themselves require endless patience and emotional and mental endurance, but in addition to the teacher's endeavor to promote good manners, self control, work habits, tolerance, understanding, good behavior, respect, and a sense of public and citizenship.

NO GRUMBLES
However, teachers seldom grumble about this. They grumble far too little to the public for being substituted for parents. They grumble too little about the adult world which tends to neutralize teachers' efforts in developing honesty, love, loyalty, etc. If teachers were TV sets, they could turn their minds off Friday afternoon and not wonder why "little Johnny" is always so alien or "Sister" constantly irritating others around her.

Or what might be done to increase Paul's enthusiasm for his studies and thereby produce better results. If teachers were TV sets, they would not be concerned that brilliant Jane is so preoccupied with the opposite sex that both her character and her personality, not to speak of her studies, are being stifled.

Teachers should not be constantly reminded to seek material reward, but should be reminded of the fact that the teacher gets beyond his ability to maintain it, no amount of material reward will be of value, nor will money be able to repair the damages done to society by the overload.

Soviet Image Now Shaky After Purge in Kremlin

1. The best guess as to the future prospects for Khrushchev's successor is that a power struggle probably cannot be avoided. The experts say Communist party boss Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin appear to represent at the moment the two bureaucracies of the party and the government and these together with
2. the military, the police, the KGB and the party apparatus, and this has been a principal contribution to the loss of Soviet prestige. It renders virtually all important aspects of Soviet policy uncertain.
3. While Brezhnev and Kosygin have reaffirmed Khrushchev's policy of peaceful co-existence, the rise of new men and their jockeying for power could move Soviet policy in the future in almost any direction.
4. Khrushchev's success or failure is a serious problem in handling relations with the so-called nonaligned countries of Asia and Africa — such countries as India, Egypt, Iraq, Syria, and the United Arab Republic. Khrushchev was a personal symbol of the Soviet policy of SALISBURY (AP).—Southern Rhodesian African chiefs announced today they are in favor of independence under white rule, the South African Press Association reported.

The announcement came from a senior chief in a notification to Internal Affairs Minister William Harper during the recent meeting of the independence conference in Salisbury.

The gathering, which was attended by 622 chiefs and headmen at Domboshava, 20 miles from Salisbury.

The senior chief who said he was speaking for all his colleagues told Harper that the Indaba was unanimous in agreeing that Rhodesia should receive independence from Britain.

"We have discussed this matter in the traditional way," he said. "We have come to a decision and this is the end of the matter."

Sapa said the chiefs would take a formal vote on the matter later today.

The chiefs indicated was Premier Ian Smith's method of ascertaining the African masses' opinion on the independence issue. The British government has told him the chiefs' expression of opinion is not acceptable to it as properly representing the African population's views.

But Smith's reply is adamant that the Indaba's outcome indicates the Africans are behind him in his demand for independence before Christmas.

He is confident too that a national referendum Nov. 5 by those entitled to vote will give him an emphatic "yes" in favor of independence. Thereafter he seems set on an outright demand to the British government for independence for his country with the threat he may declare independence unilaterally if he is refused.

profoundly three major problems caused the summit. First, the leadership in Russia and China. Khrushchev out. These causes arise out of Khrushchev's way of running the government in recent years, questions of allocations of resources — among military weapons, industry and consumer goods, and the quarrel with Red China.

Khrushchev has already been ousted in official Soviet publications as "misleading the people" and "betraying a party cult of personality," which simply means that he was getting to be dictatorial about running the government and doing things his own way without adequately consulting with the 10 or so other men in the theoretically collective leadership.

Nevertheless, in removing Khrushchev to gain a more orderly pattern of government and eliminate his own power, the new leaders have lost the dynamism of his personality.
